Wrong Change

For half an hour he had been afoot patiently on the long line at the box office. This was to be a treat to his wife on her birthday. Finally it was his turn. He bought two tickets in the orchestra. Then as he left the ticket office he counted his change.

"You gave me the wrong change," he told the ticket seller.

"Mister, go read the sign above. It states: No refunds or corrections in change after you leave the ticket office. Too bad for you."

"But you did give me the wrong change. I wanted it rectified," he insisted. The ticket seller signaled to a rather heavy set man who came over to the protester.

"That sign means just what it says. So go on your way. Next time count your change first," said this second man.

"I want to speak to the manager. That's my right," insisted the ticket buyer.

At the moment the manager entered the lobby. He was told briefly what it was all about.

"Sorry about it, mister. But that's the rule. If you claim you have had the wrong change, too bad. We rectify nothing once you are away from the ticket seller."

"Then that is the final word and nothing more can or will be done?" questioned the man.

"Absolutely," was the reply. "Please leave the theatre quietly."

"Just want you to know I received ten dollars too much. Since you refuse to take it back, I will give it to charity in your name."

Hold His Head Higher

"Sure I am," complained John Reynolds to his Psychiatrist, "one of the richest and most powerful men in the world. I have but to move my little finger, and even dictators tremble. I control the destiny of a lot of countries and people. I should be content. But I have a problem. You know my brother Peter. He is my problem."

"Just what is the present problem you have with Peter?" asked the Psychiatrist. "I have met him. I know that you regard him as a first class bum. As a failure. But you do invite him to all your affairs."

"That was a promise I made to my mother," explained the billionaire. "And I am keeping it. Whenever I have him at one of my affairs, you should see how proud and stuck-up he acts. In fact, he holds his head up higher than mine. I figure it should be the other way. He should drop his head. He should be ashamed that he is a failure in life. Ashamed that I have to support him."

"That problem shouldn't bother you at all," smiled the smart psychiatrist. "I myself have noticed it at these affairs to which you have invited me. I questioned him about it. And he gave me a simple answer right to the point."

"Tell it to me, it isn't confidential, demanded the billionaire.

"Your brother is rather logical in the way he acts. You are the one to be ashamed. To drop you head. You have a good-for-nothing as a brother. He holds his head up higher. He is proud of you. His brother is the most powerful man in the world."

The Worry Specialist

All of us have worries. Sometimes they seem to get the better of us. And there are times that we wish we could go to some kind of a specialist. Not a Psychiatrist or a Psychologist. But to just an ordinary fellow. One who has had the same kind of worries and troubles that plague us. And he knows just what to do. So this fellow came to our town. He hung up his shingle: "The Worry Specialist."

And he began to do a lot of business-if that is what you want to call it. Seems he had the answer for every kind of worry. That is until my uncle, Joe Forrest went to see him.

"They say you can handle by yourself any worry. Is that true?" asked my uncle. Who had spent a sleepless night trying to find some answers to things bothering him.

"My mother-in-law is planning to stay with us for three months. It gives me a big headache. Can you find the answer?"

"Sure can do that," smiled the Worry Specialist. "Others have had the same trouble. I'll do the worrying for you."

"I am going to go broke at the end of the month and lose my business. Can you help me? Can you find the answer?"

"Sure can," repeated the Worry Specialist. "Others have had the same trouble. I'll do the worrying for you."

"How much will you charge me for all of these services?" demanded my uncle.

"I am reasonable," explained the Worry Specialist. "Only the sum of $345.00."

"I haven't a cent to my name," said my uncle. "So you worry how you are going to get paid-and then you help me."
